Obama rejects Medicare voucher, turns to a beefed-up IPAB

By Jane Norman, CQ HealthBeat Associate Editor
April 13, 2011

President Barack Obama would give additional power to an independent advisory board — one already highly unpopular with Republicans — to wring additional savings out of Medicare, according to a fact sheet the White House released in connection with the president's speech Wednesday outlining his deficit reduction proposal.

Health takes a hit in spending deal but priorities survive

By Jane Norman, CQ HealthBeat Associate Editor
April 12, 2011

The cuts included in the spending compromise for fiscal 2011 will spread pain across federally funded healthcare programs and harm important initiatives. But the hits could have been even more devastating, advocates and lawmakers said.

Patient safety program could save lives, billions, HHS says

By John Reichard, CQ HealthBeat Editor
April 12, 2011

A long line of health industry heavyweights flanked top Health and Human Services officials at the National Press Club on Tuesday to launch what Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services chief Donald M. Berwick has called the most ambitious national effort ever to reduce medical errors.

GOP budget plan takes Medicare debate to new heights, depths

By Rebecca Adams, CQ HealthBeat Associate Editor
April 8, 2011

When the U.S. House of Representatives adopts the Republican fiscal 2012 budget resolution, it will be the first time a congressional chamber has endorsed a dramatic reduction in benefits for senior citizens and people with disabilities.
